YOUR WEDDING DAY

AND

THE FAMOUS MEN AND WOMEN WHO HAVE SHARED IT.

May 4-William Hickling Prescott, Daniel Appleton, Margaret Oliphant.

By MARY MARSHALL.

"Contrary to the assertion of La Bruyere, who says that the most fortunate husband finds reason to regret his condition at least once in twentyfour hours, I may truly say that I have found no such day in the quarter of a century that Providence has spared us to each other."

It was in these words that William Hickling Prescott, the great historian, commented on his marriage on his twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. He was married on his twenty-fourth birthday to Susan Amory, and their life together stands out as one of delightful companionship and per-fect handless. fect happiness. This was on May 4.

Prescott started out in life with the ambition to be a lawyer. But he was early afflicted with severe rheumatism and an affection of the sight which rendered one eye useles and the other good only to see his way around. The young man was almost despondent young man was almost despondent when he met and became engaged to Miss Amory. But it is said that he forgot his suffering, forgot his disappointed hopes, in his great happiness. Also, he forgot his bachelor companions. Prescott used to make atrocious puns, and when some of these same bachelor friends twitted him with neglecting them after his engagement, he responded with a line from Virgil-the last word of which was a pun on his fiancee's name: "Omnia vincit amor et nos cedamos Amori."

About a year after his marriage Prescott decided to store his mind with as much as possible of the world's literature. He employed secretaries to read to him and his beloved wife also served as eyes for the afflicted man. A year or so after undertaking this work of acquiring knowledge, Prescott decided to become a historian and through many years of suffering and semi-blindness he kept to his purpose. Without his wife's cheerful compan-lonship and constant attention this purpose might have been possible, but Prescott could not have been the happy, buoyant sufferer that he was. happy, buoyant sufferer that he was.
Even when he was away from her, Prescott found her an inspiration. At the height of his career, when he was the lion of literary London, he wrote home to her: "Dear Susan, I never see anything beautiful in nature or art, or heart-stirring music in churches—
the only place where music does stir the heart without thinking of you and my heart-without thinking of you and wishing you could be by my side if only for a moment."
